

Wild Science Attracts Fairgoers

Visions of a mad scientist may pop in your head when you hear about the Wild Science show.

But the exhibits, which are electrifying and mind-boggling, are free, safe, and fun for all El Dorado County Fairgoers attending the fair from June 18-21, 2009.

“Wild Science is a traveling science exhibit designed for every age, from toddlers to seniors,” said Pam Shultz, who owns Wild Science with her husband Robert. “Our 30 interactive stations entice people to touch, push, turn and jiggle parts in any one of 30 exhibits as they learn and play.”

The exhibits pique interests in science, math, physics, electricity, music and offer fairgoers the opportunity to explore without fear, she added. “People can make and play with giant bubbles, build massive towers with blocks, play on a perpetual motion machine or excavate “bones” in an archeological area.”

“We know that not everyone can go to a science museum,” added Shultz. “Fairgoers can come to the El Dorado County Fair with their family and friends to experience the learning and fun, then go enjoy the rest of the fair.”
